Titan Cloud Software acquires JMM Global

Two market-leading firms combine to become the undisputed leader in compliance software and services for the downstream petroleum industry.

Titan Cloud Software has announced the acquisition of JMM Global, bringing together two providers of UST (Underground Storage Tank) compliance software and services for the fuel industry.

Titan Cloud Software—whose customers include 7-11, Circle K, XPO Logistics, Hertz, and other leading national brands—delivers the industry-standard compliance platform for retail and commercial fuel providers.

"Merging with JMM Global allows us to bring together two market leaders to create a company that provides best-in-class software and services to an industry that is hungry for innovation, automation, and artificial intelligence, along with the high-touch support that we've always offered our customers," said David Freese, President and CEO of Titan Cloud.

JMM Global is located near Chicago and was founded by Jon Mariñas in 2003. "I am excited to be part of Titan. JMM has a product set that fits nicely with Titan's vision, and being a part of the team will allow us to stay committed to our high standard of service and gives us plenty of room to grow," said Jon Mariñas.

The acquisition follows a series of investments by Titan Cloud into sales and marketing, with Chief Revenue Officer John Donnelly III and several key hires having joined the company in August.

Last update: October 31, 2019