

Puma Energy digs deeper into Paraguayan market with new opening

Puma Energy has expanded its fuel retailing network in Paraguay with the opening of a new service station in Capiatá.

Company executives inaugurated the new facility, thanking consumers for their trust and fidelity to the brand's growth.

With this new opening Puma Energy demonstrates its intention of expanding in the Paraguayan fuel retailing market, providing fuel products and motoring services.

During the last three years, the company has invested an estimated $60 million in the development of infrastructure, from gas stations to fuel plants.

Puma Energy started operating in Paraguay in 2002, it now holds a network of over 200 gas stations in the South American country.
