

HUCK'S incorporates Acumera's C-Store Connections Package

HUCK'S Convenience Stores has selected Acumera to provide network management and security services across its network.

HUCK'S, which is owned by Martin & Bayley and operates 115 stores in four states, was in need of a more comprehensive solution to support Payment Card Industry (PCI) compliance, improve network reliability and increase operational visibility, according to Paul Black, vice president of IT at the company.

"As a level one retailer, we need a strong managed security solution that supports the PCI compliance process, but also provides up-to-the-minute visibility into our store operations," said Black.

"Acumera's C-Store Connections package delivers both."

Acumera's C-Store Connections package includes the Merchant Gateway managed firewall, the AcuVigil dashboard for remote network monitoring and management and Apps for Your Network services.

"Convenience store IT leaders are under constant pressure to stay on top of the dynamic cybersecurity landscape, meet evolving industry standards and keep stores running around the clock, all while improving efficiency," said Tom Yemington, Acumera's vice president of sales and marketing.

Acumera is the leading provider of connections services for convenience stores, gas stations and petroleum wholesalers.
