

Trump or Clinton? Car wash asks to “show your vote”

Classy Chassis Car Washes and Detailing, with various locations in Washington, United States, is conducting a wash bay mock polls in time for the upcoming United States presidential elections.

Three of Classy Chassis’s self-service car washes located at University Place, Lakewood, and Parkland have two designated bays each which are labelled with banners for the “voting” — wash in the one on the left for Clinton, wash in the one on the right for Trump, according to the company website.

To know who the ‘leading’ presidential candidate is, the poll results are monitored and updated on classychassis.com/election2016/

It is a light-hearted community tool which aims to let people’s voice be heard, said Corey Campbell, Classy Chassis President.

“We figured with all the ‘dirt’ in this election, why not get clean? Vote and feel better, since none of us will come election day...” added Campbell.

There are also ‘regular’ wash bays for customers who opt not to participate in the mock polls.
