

Argentina: AXION Energy introduces new fuels to more than 460 operators

The company launched its new line of premium QUANTIUM fuels and announced that they will continue to increase the number of dispensers.

AXION Energy brought together more than 460 operators from its 632 service stations to present the company's annual plan. The priorities for AXION Energy are to continue to increase the number of gas pumps, improve the sales volume of its high-ranking fuels and consolidate the growth of its brands Spot, Castrol and its Premium fuels - known as QUANTUM, from now on - reported Surtidores.com.ar.

AXION energy, owned by Pan American Energy, is also implementing a $1.5 billion investment plan to expand its refinery in Campana, Buenos Aires. They intend to increase their fuel production capacity by 60%.

"We will have more and better fuels to go out and fight harder than ever for a greater share of the market," explained the company to operators during the event held at the Costa Salguero Convention Center.