

USA: Fast Phil's c-stores to offer NCR self-checkout solution

NCR Corporation self-checkout technology, FastLane, will be offered in all 46 Fast Phil's stores across the U.S.

Fast Phil's convenience stores parent company, Raymer Oil, is partnering with NCR Corporation to offer self-checkout technology FastLane in all 46 Fast Phil's stores across the U.S.

NCR's self-checkout solution for convenience stores is designed to give customers fast service, control and flexibility. Customers can grab what they need, scan, bag and pay, and get back out the door. This frees up the store attendant to focus on customers needing assisted service.

NCR's solutions help run the entire operations of fuel and convenience retailers, from the point-of-sale to the forecourt, foodservice, car wash, lottery and payments. With features like targeted marketing on display screens at the pump and tailored loyalty programs, NCR solutions aims at increasing foot traffic into the store.

"We were looking for a strategic partner that could help to modernize and automate our stores in the highly competitive fuel and convenience market,” said Matthew Redmond, CEO of Raymer Oil, which is headquartered in Statesville, N.C. “With NCR we can modernize the customer experience, reap efficiencies and simplify operations to support our growth plans.”

“We’re excited that with our unique experience we can bring enterprise technology to all the moving parts of Raymer Oil’s business, with the support and insights they need to compete and thrive,” said David Wilkinson, senior vice president and general manager of NCR Retail.
