

Petrol PLAZA

Poland: AVIA is ready to purchase a part of Orlen's stations

The sites may be destined for sale following the decision of the European Commission regarding the consent to acquire the Lotos Group S.A. by PKN Orlen S.A.

© AVIA

AVIA International, an association which gathers 3,200 of petrol stations in Europe has made a proposal to PKN Orlen to purchase a package of stations. The sites may be destined for sale following the decision of the European Commission regarding the consent to acquire the Lotos Group S.A. by PKN Orlen S.A.

AVIA International is a Swiss legal association that gathers importers, producers, wholesalers and retailers of fuels, who cooperate under the AVIA brand in 16 countries of Europe. The entire group generated in 2018 revenues at the level of over €20 billion.

The group has been operating under this brand and presently include 3,200 stations in Europe.

“We express a considerable interest in purchasing the package of petrol stations that can be possibly destined for sale following the decision of the European Commission regarding the consent to acquire the Lotos Group by PKN Orlen,” says Mr Adam Sikorski, President of Unimot S.A.

AVIA conducted a similar acquisition in Germany in September by taking over 155 of petrol stations from TESSOL Kraftstoffe.