

USA: GIANT opens two new stores

GIANT entered into an agreement to acquire the locations in Columbia and Quarryville from Musser's Markets in August.

GIANT Food Stores rolled out two new stores in Columbia and Quarryville. The company entered into an agreement to acquire the 40,000 and 50,000 square-foot locations from Musser's Markets in August, according to a press release. Both stores operate 6 a.m. to 10 p.m., seven days a week and each employ approximately 100 full and part time team members.

"GIANT is committed to making life easier for our customers, focusing on easy, fresh meal ideas to help busy families put good food on the table," said Erin Arnold, Columbia GIANT store manager. "Bringing another convenient location to the Lancaster County community also helps us to better serve our customers with expanded product variety and new offerings for a one-stop shopping experience."

"We're excited to bring another GIANT store to life in Quarryville, a community that has truly welcomed us," said Nicole McMillan, Quarryville GIANT store manager. "In addition to a refreshed store, the Quarryville GIANT also features the convenience of an on-site fuel station located within the store parking lot, making life a bit easier for our busy customers."
