Forecourt retailer Tout's has signed a deal to be supplied by Nisa from the end of the month. Tout's hopes making the move to Nisa will help the company provide a greater range in store, particularly within the fresh and chilled categories.

Tout's currently operates two sites in Bristol, with Budegen's convenience stores and Subways. The company plans to have 10 outlets by 2025.

Zena Tout, Brand Director at Tout's said the plan for the future of their business will see Tout's concentrate heavily on fresh as well as local produce and joining Nisa will enable them to increase the choice of products for customers, including in areas such as the 'food for tonight' offer.

"With the long-term vision of the business and new site developments in the pipeline, having the opportunity and support to trade under our own brand was extremely appealing and is something we have wanted to do for some time,” Zeda said.

“Tout’s is a very highly respected retailer within the sector, and we’re honoured to have the opportunity to support them in their plans to grow their business,” head of key accounts at Nisa, Victoria Lockie.
