

Spain: Plenoil to open its first station in Valladolid

The new site will be the company's second location in Castile and León, following the station opened in Ávila.

Plenoil, one of the leading operators of automated fuel stations in Spain, has announced the opening of its first fuel station in Valladolid. The station will be the company's second location in Castilla y León, after the one recently opened in Ávila.

Despite the pandemic and the mobility restrictions, Plenoil continues with its expansion plan for 2020 and aims to operate 65 locations in Spain by the end of the year.

Plenoil intends to become the first independent fuel station operator in Spain with 150 sites by 2022.

Plenoil fuel stations are staffed during the day, and offer self-service 24 hours every day of the week. Fuel is paid for directly at a machine available at the pump. Plenoil app allows users to access individual or monthly bills, as well as to find the nearest Plenoil site.
