

Ghana: Puma Energy launches new station in Accra

The new site in East Legon falls under the company's plan to expand its presence in the country's urban areas.

Puma Energy continues its expansion in Ghana's urban areas with the opening of the company's latest fuel station in East Legon, Accra. Located on the Adjiringano Road, the station will provide access to fuels and lubricants, according to a press release.

"The East Legon branch continues in the Puma Energy tradition by upholding our strong values and business ethos. We want to support communities in a unique way by offering quality and affordable fuels and lubricants. This is very dear to us at Puma Energy," said Henry Osei, Managing Director of Puma Energy Ghana Distribution Limited.

Owned by the Singaporean Trafigura and the Angolan Sonangol Group, downstream oil company Puma Energy has around 2,900 retail sites across the world, a presence at over 80 airports and a network of storage terminals.
