

France: Gaz'Up launches its first GNV station in the Paris region

Latest Gaz'Up openings took place in April this year in Langon and Boulazac, in the Nouvelle-Aquitaine region.

Gaz'Up, a network of (bio)gas filling stations for carriers in France, inaugurated its first gas natural vehicle (GNV) filling station in the Paris region. Located in Le Coudray-Montceaux, in the Essonne department, the station will offer compressed natural gas (CNG) and its renewable version bio-CNG, reports Gaz-Mobilité.fr.

Latest Gaz'Up openings took place in April in Langon and Boulazac, in the Nouvelle-Aquitaine region.

The Gaz'Up Le Coudray-Montceaux station is equipped with three refuelling lanes and a high canopy to protect users from the sun and bad weather.

Accessible to all types of vehicles running on natural gas, the station has two payment terminals with tactile screens. Payment can be made by credit card or via the Gaz'Up badge.