Argentina's leading low-cost fuel station network opened two new sites in the province of Buenos Aires, in line with its nationwide expansion plan.

Voy con Energía, the leading low cost fuel station network in Argentina, opened two new sites in the province of Buenos Aires during the last month. The locations were launched in the towns of Trenque Lauquen and Gorchs, reports surtidores.com.ar.

Both stations will serve both light and heavy duty vehicles. The Trenque Lauquen station will have three refuelling islands, and the one in Gorchs will offer five. Both stations will also feature a Re Tienda, Voy con Energía's convenience offering.

In line with its expansion plan, the company will soon open new facilities in Villa Constitución (Santa Fe), Coronel Du Graty (Chaco), Lanús, Francisco Álvarez, Olavarría and Junín, reports surtidores.com.ar.

Further, Voy con Energía will inaugurate its largest service station so far in July, following the upgrading of a company-owned site in General Roca (Río Negro).
