

Spain: Ballenoil plans to open 20 sites in Galicia in two years

The company considers increasing its target to 50 fuel stations in the autonomous region within the next five years.

Ballenoil, the largest independent fuel station operator in Spain, plans to open 20 locations in the autonomous region of Galicia within two years with an investment of ten million euros, reports La Voz de Galicia.

Although Ballenoil's initial plan is to open 20 sites, the operator does not rule out increasing its target to 50 stations in Galicia in the next five years. This would make Galicia one of the pillars of the company's growth in Spain, according to Ballenoil.

Ballenoil has started its expansion plan in Galicia with the launching of a new fuel station in Betanzos. The next openings will take place in Ourense, Ferrol and Redondela, where the company expects to be able to activate its locations before the end of the year.

The Ballenoil stations in Galicia will operate on a 24-hour self-service basis and will be staffed during business hours.
