

Moroccan petrol stations urged to display fuel prices

Morocco's Ministry of Corporate Affairs and Governance has called on petrol stations in the country to display all types of fuel being sold and its full up-to-date prices.

A joint decision made by the governance ministry, the Ministry of Industry, Investment, Trade, and Digital Economy, and the Ministry of Energy, Mines, and Sustainable Development was published in the official bulletin urging fuel stations to make fuel prices, inclusive of taxes, visible to customers.

The order also aims at the "generalization of the display of all types and fuels sold in stations, instead of displaying only the two types (Gasoil and Super) as is currently the case."

Petrol station operators have been given a maximum of 10 months to comply with the order, reports Morocco World News.
