

ExxonMobil, Buick team up to offer in-vehicle fuel payments

Buick drivers may now pay for fuel at more than 11,000 Exxon or Mobil stations across the United States without leaving their cars.

The in-vehicle fuel payment has been made possible thanks to a new update to Marketplace, the industry's first in-vehicle commerce platform.

The update has added ExxonMobil's pay for fuel functionality right to the infotainment screen of eligible Buick vehicles, allowing drivers to pay for fuel from their vehicle without the need for credit card or smartphone.

The platform also automatically syncs drivers to their ExxonMobil Speedpass+™ app account, and drivers accumulate rewards points with each purchase, according to a company release.